

HUNDREDS IN PANIC AS SHIP HITS ROCKS

Mont Temple Strikes Off the Nova Scotia Coast.

IN RAGING SNOWSTORM

Officers Lose Bearings, and Vessel Leaves Course.

Linen from Antwerp to Canada Port Laden with 600 Immigrants, Whose Cries Add to the Terrors of the Night—Big Boat Pounded by Ruthless Breakers as Terrified Passengers Are Being Rescued.

Lumenburg, N. S., Dec. 2.—Early this morning the 6,000-ton steamship Mont Temple, of the Canadian Pacific, Antwerp-St. John service, crashed upon the ledges that surround Ironbound Island, 15 miles from here.

On board were about six hundred passengers, mostly immigrants, and there was a wild panic when the steamer hit the rocks. The sea was not very rough, and, so far as can be learned, every one will be saved before morning, as several tugs and other vessels began taking the people off late in the afternoon. The ship will undoubtedly be a total loss.

Ran Into Snowstorm.

The ship left Antwerp November 29 and had a rough voyage across the Atlantic. Last night she ran into a thick snowstorm, which prevailed until after daybreak, and it was impossible for the officers to see very far ahead. The Mont Temple evidently had gone off her course, as Ironbound Island is about thirty miles farther west than the ship should have run. Suddenly the roar of breakers was heard ahead by the lookout, and, although the engines were quickly reversed, the dead weight of the ship carried her into the rocks.

Passengers Become Calm.

In a second she was pounding heavily, and finally was driven into a narrow cleft in the rocks with seas breaking half over her. The immigrants poured out on deck. Many of the women, some with children in their arms, fell on their knees and prayed for help.

The officers and crew did their best to quiet the terror-stricken people, and gradually, when it was seen that the vessel was not sinking, the foreigners became calmed.

QUENTIN WAS NOT LOST.

President's Little Son Simply Tardied After School Closed.

"Have you seen Quentin—Quentin Roosevelt?"

The President's ten-year-old son did not get home from the Ford school—he is in the sixth grade—on time yesterday afternoon—and inquiry was made for him. He was not lost; not a bit of it. He is a sturdy, resourceful little man, even if scant in years, and amply able to take care of himself. But the fact that inquiries were being made for the President's son caused a decided stir in the school neighborhood. Everybody became busy. One volunteer searcher went all through the Ford school building, carefully looking through one room after another, and even inspected the tower.

Finally, one of Quentin's fellow-pupils said he had seen him over on Rhode Island avenue just after 2 o'clock when school closed. Then he was quickly traced.

A telephone message to the White House, through police headquarters, about 5 o'clock, brought forth the cheering message that Quentin was at home, safe and sound.

HEART DISEASE CLAIMS MANY.

Mortality List in New York Shows 164 Deaths Last Week.

New York, Dec. 2.—The city mortality list for the week ended November 30 shows a big increase of deaths from heart disease over the corresponding week of 1906. The deaths from this cause last week were 164. During the week ended December 1, 1906, the number was 56.

There is a marked increase in the total death rate, only a part of which is explained by the increase in deaths from heart trouble. The total last week was 1,246, for the corresponding week last year, 1,244. The number of deaths per 1,000 inhabitants for the two weeks are, respectively, 16.39 and 15.83.

HENRY O. HAVEMEYER ILL.

Sugar King Taken with Acute Indigestion While Hunting.

Northport, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Henry O. Havemeyer, the sugar king, is seriously ill at one of his country homes, Merrville, L. I., six miles from here.

To-night members of his family arrived by train and were met by two automobiles and hastened to the Havemeyer home. Dr. Ross, of Brentwood, first attended him, and there has since been with him physicians from the city. Mr. Havemeyer came up last Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving.

He was taken with acute indigestion. A friend, asked as to his condition to-night, said his condition is grave.

TICKET SCALPER WINS.

Pennsylvania Law on the Subject Held Unconstitutional.

Wilkesbarre, Dec. 2.—John C. Madden, the first man in Pennsylvania convicted of theatrical scalping, won a victory to-day, and one of great interest to theatrical men, when Judge Lynch decided that the act under which he was convicted was unconstitutional.

Madden was arrested last Christmas for selling tickets for a performance by Ethel Barrymore, and was convicted under the ticket scalping act. Contending, however, that the act is unconstitutional, he appealed.

ROOSEVELT OPPOSED

Poll Shows Few Congressmen Favor Third Term.

NOT TO DICTATE SUCCESSOR

Majority Believe He Will Not Attempt to Control Convention Next Year—Great Number Prefer a Conservative Platform—Financial Condition Has Little Political Effect.

A poll of the Republican members of Congress on the question of whether the party and public demands will result in President Roosevelt's renomination shows plainly that Roosevelt is not the choice of the party leaders. The majority of those consulted say that he will not dictate as to the nominee. The poll was taken yesterday by a New York paper.

Twenty of those interviewed admit that the financial situation may eventually hurt the party, while seven contend that it has helped President Roosevelt.

A big majority of those interviewed are strongly in favor of the adoption of a conservative platform at the next Republican national convention.

The following is the result on the Republican outlook as shown by the answers propounded to those interviewed:

Question 1. Do you think that party and public demand will result in the renomination of Roosevelt?

Yes, 22; circumstances may make his nomination necessary, 6; no, 23; noncommittal, 55. Total, 106.

2. Should he not receive the nomination, will he, in your opinion, dictate the nomination and the party policies?

Yes, 16; no, 34; no, but his policies will be endorsed, 4; noncommittal, 73. Total, 127.

3. To what extent has the financial situation changed the political outlook?

No, 6; may have had effect on Republican, 20; helped Roosevelt, 20; noncommittal, 51. Total, 123.

4. Should the platform be constructed on radical or conservative lines?

Radical, 47; radical, 3; progressive, 8; stand pat, 5; should affirm Roosevelt's policies, 13; should affirm Cannon's policies, 1; noncommittal, 61. Total, 138.

OPPOSES MIXED MARRIAGES

Utica Priest Will Not Perform Them in the Future.

Utica, N. Y., Dec. 2.—The Right Rev. Mon. J. S. M. Lynch, pastor of St. John's Roman Catholic Church in this city, prompted by the recent rapid growth in Utica of marriages between Catholics and Protestants, is out with a statement in which he paints a fearful picture of the results of so-called "mixed marriages." As a result of the pastor's statements it is understood a number of such marriages arranged in St. John's parish after the holidays will not take place.

Rev. Dr. Lynch says:

"The first cause of mixed marriages is the decay of faith among Catholics. There are three great evils in this country. The first is race suicide, the second is divorce, and the third mixed marriages, and they all spring from a decay of faith. In the United States there are 2,000,000 homes without children. Just think of it.

"If Catholics had the right and lively faith they would know that marriage was instituted by God Almighty for having children. That is the primary object of marriage. If they enter that relation and refuse to have children they are living in sin.

"Now take the figures from St. John parish. In the last twenty-five years there have been in this parish 228 marriages, and of these, 178 of them were mixed marriages. Of these 178 marriages, there should be two children from each.

"I don't know why there should not be ten or fifteen, because that is what marriages are for, but suppose there were only two children from each, that would be 356, and measured by statistics, it shows 228 children lost to the faith in St. John's Church, Utica, and the probability is that there were many more.

"The archbishop has absolutely forbidden all mixed marriages in Canada. It is to be hoped that the bishops of the United States will take action to prevent any in this country. During the past quarter of a century I have never performed a mixed marriage, and I never intend to.

Dr. Lynch's statement has created wide comment in this city among all religious denominations.

MRS. BRADLEY JURY LOCKED IN ROOM

Unable to Reach a Verdict at 10 o'clock Last Night.

MAY BE DISAGREEMENT

Prisoner Disappointed at Message Brought to the Court.

Opinion Prevails in Some Quarters That Inability to Arrive at a Decision on the Part of the Jury, Indicates a Disagreement and Retrial—Synopsis of Addresses and Justice Stafford's Charge.

At 10 o'clock last night indications were that the trial of Mrs. Annie M. Bradley, which has been in progress for three weeks, would end in a disagreement of the jury.

At that hour the jury sent word to Justice Stafford that they had not reached an agreement, and that there was no prospect of their doing so. The message was delivered by Clerk Samuel McComas Hawken, and the justice instructed the clerk to direct the deputy marshal to lock the jury up for the night.

When it was announced that the jury would not report, the courtroom, which was crowded, was emptied in a few moments. More than 100 persons, mostly women, sat in the room from the time the jury retired at 4:30 until 10 o'clock.

Returns to Her Cell.

When the jury filed out Mrs. Bradley was taken to the prisoners' pen below, where she was joined by several women friends, who sought to comfort her. She expected an acquittal, and as the hours wore on and the jury did not come in, she was deeply disappointed, but did not manifest it in any unusual manner.

Arthur Brown, Jr., her oldest boy, spent much of the time with his mother in the courtroom.

In anticipation of Mrs. Bradley's acquittal, Hon. A. B. Hayes, solicitor of the Internal Revenue Bureau, a Utah man, and a friend of Mrs. Bradley, and Samuel J. Masters, arrived at the courthouse about 7 o'clock in an automobile, accompanied by their wives, prepared to take Mrs. Bradley to the Hayes home.

When it was seen Mrs. Bradley would have to return to jail, they brought to Deputy Marshal Springfield a fur robe to wrap around the prisoner in her cold ride to the dreary jail, where she has been incarcerated for nearly a year.

Courtroom Is Filled.

The largest crowd yet assembled at the courthouse to witness the proceedings in the trial, assembled yesterday, and every inch of space was occupied. Hundreds were turned away, and lines were established at the entrances and maintained all day by those anxious to get inside the room. The women spectators outnumbered the males more than twenty to one, and the benches back of the inclosure reserved for newspaper reporters and lawyers, resembled the first floor of a theatre at a matinee more than a courtroom where a woman was on trial for her life.

Attorney Hoover opened the proceedings for the defense, and made a careful analysis of the testimony. It was evident his argument made a deep impression on the jury. He devoted himself almost exclusively to the legal phases of the case, and succeeded in neutralizing as great deal of the damaging evidence that had been presented by the government.

Most Dramatic Scene.

The most dramatic scene of the day occurred during District Attorney Baker's argument, when he sought to show that Mrs. Bradley had started from Salt Lake City to come to Washington, and not for California, as she stated. Mr. Baker, turning to the jury near the close of his argument, in a dramatic way said one small incident gave the lie to her statement. He said it was in the evening of December 8 she told a clerk at the Raleigh Hotel she was going to the Ebbitt House to get her mail.

The District Attorney said this statement on her part after she had been in Washington but three hours showed conclusively she had left instructions in Salt Lake City to have her mail forwarded to Washington. Attorney Hoover promptly corrected the District Attorney, and when the latter had closed his argument was permitted to read to the jury the record of the testimony on the point. It showed Mrs. Bradley had testified she telephoned to her sister after reaching Ogden that she had changed her mind and was going to Washington, and to send mail to her here, including the rebate due her on her railroad ticket.

Judge Powers, in his argument, advanced the theory that Mrs. Bradley went to the room of Brown to commit suicide in his presence, and in a struggle for the possession of the weapon Senator Brown was shot.

This was eagerly seized upon by District Attorney Baker, who devoted considerable time to a discussion as to a verdict of manslaughter, and Justice Stafford, in his charge to the jury, instructed them that if they found Brown was shot during a struggle for the weapon, it would be their duty to return a verdict of manslaughter.

Mrs. Bradley Scored.

Mr. Baker excoriated Mrs. Bradley, and held her up as a woman who had pursued Brown, and who had the opportunity to escape from his advances if she chose. Turning toward Mrs. Bradley at one portion of his argument, he said:

"When a woman listens the victory is half won."

He ended his argument with a powerful appeal to the jury in behalf of the "woman who is good," and not waste their sentiments on the defendant at the bar, who did not deserve it.

Throughout Mr. Baker's arraignment, Mrs. Bradley did not once look up, but buried her face in her handkerchief.

Justice Stafford began his charge to the jury at 3:15 o'clock, and it took a little more than an hour to deliver it, the case being given to the jury at 4:30 o'clock.

A clash between District Attorney Baker and Judge Powers occurred while the latter was making his closing argument.

FORTY-NINE ARE DEAD

Rescuers Called from Work at the Naomi Mine.

DRUNKEN MAN AMONG SAVED

Samuel Charles Turned Back by the Pit Boss and Is One of the Few Wage Earners in Little Town Who Is Still Alive—Several of the Rescue Parties Are Overcome.

Bell Vernon, Ohio, Dec. 2.—It is certain to-night that forty-nine miners have perished in the Naomi mine, that blew up last night. At 9 o'clock, a score of rescuers were called from the work. There is no longer hope of rescue, as no one could live in the mine. The body of Joseph Serley, a pumper, is the only one that has been recovered.

Entry number 36, about 1,000 feet from the surface, is reported by the rescuers as literally blocked with fragments of dead bodies.

The little village of Naomi has few bread winners left. There are only eighteen men in the village. Most of these were saved because they would not work on Sunday. The others were drunk and were turned back by the pit bosses.

Mrs. Lucy Charles is joyful to-night; for her husband, Samuel Charles, was one of the men turned back last night, because he was intoxicated. This morning Charles signed the pledge for five years.

One of the most pitiful scenes is at the home of John D. Harry, who, with his three sons, Robert, Hugh, and Samuel, was killed. The Harrys are English, and had arranged to return to England, sailing from New York December 16. There was a farewell dinner to friends at the Harry home late yesterday, before father and sons started for the mine.

Several of the rescue party were overcome this afternoon.

WILL NOT ACCEPT MILLIONS

Swarthmore College Refuses Conditional Gift of Miss Jeanes.

Philadelphia, Dec. 2.—Swarthmore College will not accept the millions which the eccentric Quaker, Miss Anna I. Jeanes, left it on condition that the institution give up all inter-collegiate sports to get it. Upon the ground that it would be morally and legally wrong for a college to surrender any of its rights upon the payment of a sum of money, President Swain, of Swarthmore, announced to the board of trustees that he was opposed to the acceptance of the bequest under the conditions imposed.

This statement was followed by a non-committal one from the board, but it was said to-night by a dozen of them, that President Swain's views were endorsed unanimously by the board, and, while a committee had been appointed to go into the matter of actual value of the gift, the whole affair was really a closed incident.

"I doubt the wisdom," said President Swain, "of accepting without qualification the conditional gift of Miss Jeanes, even if the property is worth $1,000,000 or more. But if the value of the gift is very large I am willing and even anxious to try the experiment with the understanding that the property revert to the executors of the estate in case the gift, if found after a fair trial to be of less value to the highest interests of the college than the lack of freedom of action of the board which the condition of the will imposes."

This suggested compromise, it was stated to-night, would not be agreed to by the heirs of Miss Jeanes, even if the law would allow them to accept it. Attorneys consulted said that the terms of the will were very specific and could not be withdrawn.

Bailey's Opponent Dies.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 2.—State Senator Robert B. Green, representing the San Antonio district, died suddenly to-day of heart disease while bird hunting. Senator Green was forty-four years old and was a bitter opponent of United States Senator Bailey in the sensational investigation here last winter.

REPUBLICANS THE WINNERS.

Portland, Me., Recaptured After Two Years of Democratic Rule.

Portland, Me., Dec. 2.—Portland, the largest city in the State, the first to hold its municipal election, was recaptured by the Republicans to-day, after two years of Democratic administration. Adam P. Leighton was elected mayor, defeating Mayor Nathan Clifford by over 1,100 plurality.

The contest is regarded by the press of Maine as being a specially important one as a forerunner of the approaching State campaign.

William M. Pennell, the Democratic sheriff of Cumberland County, who took a prominent part in the fight against prohibition, in Delaware, this fall, was manager of the Democratic campaign in this city.

COMMANDER VAIL IS DEAD

Retired Army Officer Passes Away Early Last Evening.

Succumbs to Sudden Attack of Acute Indigestion at His Apartments in the Farragut.

Commander Holman Vail, retired, of the United States Navy, died suddenly last evening at 6:30 o'clock from an attack of acute indigestion at his apartments in the Farragut apartment house, Seventeenth and I streets northwest.

Commander Vail was ill only fifteen minutes. Mrs. Dixon, Briscoe and Reisinger were summoned to his aid, but their combined efforts failed to revive him.

The Commander was a native of Indiana and was appointed to the navy from that State September 28, 1881. He was in active service until December 4, 1890. Since that time he had been engaged on duty at the Hydrographic Office, this city.

Commander Vail was sixty-two years of age and is survived by his wife and daughter. Mrs. Vail was prostrated by the shock of her husband's sudden and unexpected death. The Commander was in apparent good health yesterday. He had been out during the day and gave no indication of his approaching fatal illness. Arrangements for the funeral will be made to-day.

MAURETANIA HITS GALE.

Big Liner Making Good Time on First Eastward Journey.

New York, Dec. 2.—Vernon H. Brown, general agent at this port of the Cunard Line, received to-day from Capt. Pritchard, of the steamship Mauretania, flying eastward in an effort to break a record, a dispatch saying that the great turbine was 1,062 miles east of Sandy Hook, at 10 o'clock this morning, that she had averaged 23.9 knots in the teeth of a strong northeasterly gale, and that all were well.

The dispatch came by wireless telegraph at Cape Race. The average of the Lusitania on her best eastward run was more than twenty-four knots. Good weather may enable the Mauretania to beat the Lusitania's record.

STATE TREASURER FAILS.

Frank P. Glazier, of Chelsea, Mich., Owes Million Dollars.

Chelsea, Mich., Dec. 2.—Frank P. Glazier, State treasurer of Michigan, failed for a million dollars to-day. The Chelsea Bank, a State institution, of which he was president, probably will not open to-morrow. The Glazier Stove Company, a big factory controlled by Glazier, goes down like a crash.

Early developments in the case show that Glazier had deposited $100,000 of the State funds in his own bank, then borrowed it for his own use. Investigation is being made into the whereabouts of the balance of the State moneys.

Mr. Glazier is at his home here and refuses to make any statement. He has not even indicated whether he will resign his office.

SIXTIETH CONGRESS FORMALLY OPENED

Marks 120th Milestone in the Nation's History.

CANNON AGAIN SPEAKER

House and Senate Now Organized for Business.

Republican Majority in Lower Body Is Reduced from 137 to 57, While in Senate There Is an Increase of Seven—Distinguished Guests Watch Proceedings in House—Mrs. Longworth One of Huge Crowd.

For the sixtieth time in the history of the nation a new Congress convened yesterday promptly at noon, and both the House and Senate are now organized to carry on the business that will come before the country's lawmakers during the next two years.

In the Senate, the gavel was used in a dignified way by Vice President Fairbanks, and the most august deliberative body in the world came to order in a way befitting Senatorial dignity.

To all intents and purposes, it is now composed of ninety-two members, although Senators Gore and Owen were not sworn in yesterday, because they have not been formally elected by the legislature of the new State, which will, however, remove the disqualification of the two new members next Monday.

When Clerk McDowell began pounding the desk in the House of Representatives, promptly at 12 o'clock, every available bit of gallery space was filled, with the exception of a few seats in the Presidential reservation, men and women were formed in lines back of all the doors, and the din was such that the gavel at first made no impression.

New Members Quiet.

The new members were the first to subside, while the old-timers, with studied disregard of the hammering, stood in the aisles and talked shop.

When order was finally achieved and prayer was offered by the blind chaplain, Rev. Dr. Couden, the House had really begun the deliberations that mark the passing of the 120th milestone in the history of the nation.

There were some distinguished guests present who took as keen an interest in the procedure as did the 121 new members. These included Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and her sister, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, who, with Miss Hagner, occupied the space reserved for the President. Next to Mrs. Longworth, but in the diplomatic box, sat Senator Enrique Creel, Ambassador from Mexico, and Dr. Luis Anderson, of Costa Rica, who is here presiding over the Pan-American peace conference.

Bryan on the Floor.

On the floor of the House sat W. J. Bryan, probably the next Democratic nominee for the Presidency, and on the right of the Speaker's chair, as the honored guest of "A. sat Sir Courtenay Albert, "Speaker of the Court, Palace of Westminster," who is clerk to the Speaker of the English House of Commons. He showed keen interest in the action of the House from the election of Mr. Cannon as Speaker to the discussion of the rules, and the only lottery authorized by the United States government—the drawing of seats for the members.

Col. Hepburn, chairman of the Republican caucus, nominated Mr. Cannon for the Speakership, and Mr. Clayton, of Alabama, the new chairman of the Democratic caucus, nominated Mr. Williams. Mr. Cannon was elected by a vote of 397 to 154, and the chair in a fit of humor appointed a committee consisting of "Cy" Sulloway, of New Hampshire, and Olie James, of Kentucky, two of the guests of the House, and John Sharp Williams, who bravely attempted to stretch to the towering height of the others, to bring in the Speaker.

Cannon Gets Ovation.

The party came in from the north entrance, and was greeted with applause. Mr. Williams acted as bodyguard, and in his speech of presentation said he appreciated the honor that had fallen to him for the third time.

Then the oath was administered by Mr. Bingham, of Pennsylvania, the "Father of the House," and the Speaker administered it to the other House officials and Members, taking them in State delegations, several at a time. Butler, of Pennsylvania, and Cox, of New York, being
